

ABSTRACT

A content reproduction control system comprising a server apparatus and a terminal apparatus that are connected via a communication path, wherein the server apparatus includes: based on time information attached to a content, a control information generation unit operable to generate control information for specifying a range for permitting or prohibiting a user's predetermined operation in the terminal apparatus; and a distribution unit that distributes the control information to the terminal apparatus, the terminal apparatus includes: a content use unit operable to use the content; a receiving unit operable to receive the control information; and a content use control unit operable to control reproduction of the content based on the received control information.